Hi Jeri, do you have time for a truly brief call today? Apologies for the text outreach, let me know if you'd prefer email for something like this.

I was planning to text you in the next hour so happy to talk. Great timing.

Seems like senate is going to mostly be loud about how quick this is starting— before any confidence has been restored through the naming of an interim or disclosure of what happened. Might be irritated about committee makeup but way more upset about rush to make a committee. At least that's how it's trending.

Can you give me a summary of anything you know being planned for when students return? Also trending towards senate planning a rally but

Just saw the studco resolution. Did you see the senate one? Asked the BOV to review the search process and does not presuppose what the outcome of that review will be. I expect it will be to affirm Beardsley but it might not be. And it feels like it is handicapping the new BOV if senate, studco, etc either say "you just replace Scott!"
Or "you must keep Scott!"
We asked for a BOV we can trust and then I think we need to trust them and allow them to do their jobs.

iMessage

[redacted]

To me, the stucco resolution feels like it doesn't trust the BOV.

(Also, Beardsley IS the president. Whether StudCo recognizes him or not, he is the President.)

The two cents you didn't ask for. 😊

Hi Jeri, the resolution is yet to be discussed, and it was put up by the representatives—I unfortunately did not have a say in its creation, although am working to get it to a productive point now. I agree that when united, we are more powerful, and that this is a step away from the front. From my conversations with the representatives, their g BO review of the process, to

From my conversations with the representatives, their goal is to encourage the BOV, through their review of the process, to decide not to fire Beardsley. The resolution is not final, nor has it been voted upon, so what you've seen is a draft that folks may be passing around.

Always appreciate your feedback and thoughts. Always willing to hop on a call later to discuss if you're interested

Im tied up until probably 6 pm. As you have discussions, I would just consider that telling the BOV to keep Beardsley is basically the same as telling the BOV to do another search. Both the appropriate decisions.

discussions, I would just consider that telling the BOV to keep Beardsley is basically the same as telling the BOV to do another search. Both suggest that there isn't trust in the BOV to make the appropriate decisions.

Yeah I really appreciate that perspective. I personally am more interested in the approach of empowering the Board to do what they see fit and informing them of our support, as opposed to treating them like they aren't planning on taking care of business. Working on making the resolution productive and realistic now that its back in the writers room
